the Average. Men, Women and Children Were Represented and Justice's Scales Were

Busy-Bad Examples Followed.

Twenty-three men and boys and eight emales occupied the cells at the Police nple of Justice this morning, and the arance of many of them was the result a mixture of warm weather and whisky Although in a warm room and with bright pier than many of their companions who were at liberty, for they were able to tell ence of supreme happiness. But there was one man in the party who was anxious to get out, and he was the st one called for trial. He was none other than John Jones, the one-eyed colored man who is known all about the city as Buck Bill." He has only been out of the workhouse a few days, and this morning hortly after midnight he was found in-shortly after midnight he was found indulging in profanity near 12th street and Ohio avenue

Deputy Clerk Linn Harper read a charge of profanity to him.

"I'm deef," he said, "and I can't hear good."

"You are charged with profanity," said the bailiff in a loud tone. "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," was his response; "it didn't happen." Policeman Hooper said that "Buck Bill"

Policeman Hooper said that "Buck Bill" wanted to fight because he met two men on the street, and when they refused to accommodate him he used profanity. "Tain't so, judge," said the prisoner. "I had just come from church—I'm a Baptist—and these two white men wanted me to sing some of the old hymns. One of them called me a 'one-eyed ——,' and then I wanted to know what to sing. I can sing "The Man What Wrote the Seven Seals."

Then the prisoner gave the court an illus-

Seals."

Then the prisoner gave the court an illustration of what he could do, repeating some religious texts, teiling of Jonah and the whale, the virgins, and concluded by saying: "I know heil's over there," pointing to the court, "and heaven's over there," pointing in the direction of the cells. "I am afraid you are on the wrong side." "Had you been drinking?" he was asked. "No, indeed, judge, I ain't predicted to the habit."

asked the court of the officer.

"Yes, sir," was the latter's reply.

"You were filled with the wrong kind of spirits last night," remarked the court, "and you will have to pay a fine of 18 or go down."

Good day." Bad Example.

Daniel Smothers, a young colored man, those home is not just what it might be, was arraigned on suspicion, and he plead not guilty. Daniel's parents are in Albany, where they were sent at the expense of the government, and following the example of his mother he attempted to walk away with property belonging to another, and that was why he was in the procession. He was ar-rested near the center market yesterday, where a special policeman attracted a large crowd by blowing his distress whistle a number of times.

Daniel's own explanation was not satisfactory and the court sent him down.

"Not guilty," was the plea of Isaac Young, who gave a "parior social" a few nights ago and who did not have a permit. Four colored men and women, who attended the gathering, testified that they each paid ten cents at the door. When they had concluded their testimony Andrew Ford was put on the stand and asked: "Did you attend the parior social" given by Young?"

"I was there," was his response.

"Did you pay to go in?"

"No, sir; I did not have the money and I got put out."

"Then you didn't have on your wedding "Then you didn't have on your wedding arment," remarked the court. Young said that he keeps a crab and lam place in Snow's row and that he gave party to his little daughter, but he did of charge an admission fee.
"But there were four witnesses who said hey paid," said the court.
"I know that," added Young, "but they would swear to anything."
